Selected Mentoring and Teaching Funding Awards

- Center for Excellence in Teaching & Learning (CETL) College to Career Mini Grant, “COVID-19 and Systemic Racism” (2020-2021).
 - This initiative is developing an online, asynchronous course about COVID-19 and Systemic Racism, which engages the students in innovative ways to keep them connected. One of the challenges to teaching fully online asynchronous courses, it that while students like the semi-structured “go at your own pace” asynchronous framework, they also want more engagement – without scheduled Webex or Zoom sessions with their professor. We will do this with creative podcasts, Packback discussions, projects where students will go out and take photos, and college-to-career assignments, including taking a certified, online contact tracing course, as well as doing a final portfolio project which is broadly defined – e.g., it could be an art project, a rap song, a collect of photographs and journal etc. We are being very sensitive to not overload the students with too much work, making the course clearly organized and streamlined, and keeping them engaged. The funding for this course development and teaching has gone to MA/Ph.D Sociology student Tyler Gay. He is developing the course with me now. He will co-teach it with me in spring 2021. ($3,500). (Note, he also has GRA funding through the Department of Sociology and is assigned to me).
- Georgia ACLU (2019-2020). “Have Women Come a Long Way or the Long Way in Georgia? Looking at Trends from 1970 to the Present”. Principal Investigator: Deirdre Oakley. GRA Funding of Sociology Ph.D. Candidate Ifeayni Ukpabi ($11,000).
- Wiley Publishers/American Sociological Association (2018-2020). Funding for Graduate Student Editors of City & Community Zuri Tau (Managing Editor), Clinton Boyd, Jr. (Editorial Research Fellow) ($84,000). (Note, Oakley found alternative sources of funding for some of the other graduate students and two have been funded through the Department of Sociology).

- National Science Foundation Research Experiences for Undergraduates Supplement (2018-2019). Principal Investigator: Deirdre Oakley ($18,750). (Community Land Trust Study).
- National Science Foundation Research Experiences for Undergraduates Supplement (2013). Principal Investigator Lesley Reid; Co-Principal Investigators Deirdre Oakley and Erin Ruel ($18,750). (Public Housing Study).
